

BILL LOVELESS

Bill Loveless is a veteran energy journalist with a strong reputation for compelling interviews with leading newsmakers in print, on the air and in public forums.

Most recently, he has been a weekly columnist for USA Today and co-host of the “Columbia Energy Exchange,” a podcast from the Columbia university center on Global Energy Policy.

Bill previously was an editorial director for Platts, an energy news and information division of McGraw Hill Financial, where he coordinated coverage of U.S energy policy. While at Platts, he also anchored the weekly TV program “Platts Energy Week,” which aired on WUSA/CBS in Washington and on PBS stations throughout the U.S.

He is a recipient of the McGraw Hill Corporate Achievement Award, and a member of the Executive Advisory Board of the University of Rhode Island Harrington School of Communications and the National Press Club.
