
Gary E. Guy

Mr. Guy is Assistant General Counsel of Exelon Corporation, specializing in Federal Energy Regulatory Commission regulation of the electric utility and natural gas pipeline industries. He represents Exelon's six FERC-regulated transmission owner members of PJM, primarily as applicants in wholesale electric proceedings, and represents Exelon's three gas distribution companies as intervenors in pipeline supplier proceedings, and related appeals.

He is a former Equity Partner at Bruder, Gentile & Marcoux; Assistant General Counsel at Equitable Resources; Senior Associate at Cullen and Dykman; and Presiding Officer and Attorney-Advisor at the FERC.

Mr. Guy is the author of the "Biomass" chapter of the multi-volume treatise, Energy Law and Transactions (Matthew Bender), and the chapter, "Impact of Customer Choice on Local Distributor Transportation," in the multi-volume treatise, Regulation of the Gas Industry (Matthew Bender).

He has spoken at various forums, is a former Board Member and Officer of the Energy Bar Association, past President of the Foundation of the Energy Law Journal, and currently serves on the Board of the Charitable Foundation.
